"I think that her accusation is nothing more than that, an accusation," Bloom said Friday on "Fox & Friends." Bloom also weighed in on the latest accusations against former President Bill Clinton, saying they weren't truthful. "She has been intimidated by the people who are helping her, like the Mueller investigation," she said. "I am not buying this." Lisa Bloom attends the "Sex with Women" premiere hosted by Gloria Steinem at SVA Theater on May 26, 2016, in New York City. Alejo C. Perez/Getty Images In response to the first-ever presidential forum on sexual assault to be held Thursday night at Washington's Howard University, Clinton alleged Trump gropes or kisses women without their consent and that he jokes about it, making it acceptable. She said she was spurred to speak out because Trump undermined her claim that she was a "champion of women" when he asked why she didn't come forward with stories of alleged sexual assaults. "I am not sitting here, standing here, crying about the fact that I didn't come forward because people just didn't believe women," Clinton said. "It's because I did not want to be dismissed, not taken seriously, not believed. It is a testament to the gains we've made that that happens to somebody like Donald Trump. So I am happy to say that.... I am here to tell the story of a sexual assault victim that had the courage to stand up and confront her aggressor about what happened to her. "It is women like that who will continue the march toward equality, who will continue fighting for the people who need it," she added. "I hope that we continue to hear their stories." Bloom, best known for her case involving the infamous Cosby trial, said she believes Trump's accusers because they aren't vindictive and Clinton is. "I have no doubt of the [Trump accusers'] credibility," Bloom said. "It's Hillary who for whatever reason is still trying to appeal to the men
